Reading Program

While we are waiting for the 2020 books to arrive, please continue to read from the UMW shelf in the library as well as Response magazine. Books that were previously in the reading list are also scattered throughout the library in the appropriate subject area. Although they don't count towards the 2020 reading program, they are still excellent books to read.

Sunday Evening Fellowship

Sunday Evening Fellowship met in the church library at 6:30 pm on September 15. Our program centered around the 4 social actions of United Methodist Women as well as the immigration crisis. Our group was encouraged to advocate for paid family and medical leave to help working people earn a true living wage. We also discussed the very serious problem of climate Justice. Our members were encouraged to attend the Roanoke District UMW Prayer Breakfast on Saturday, October 19, at First United Methodist Church, Salem, Va. At this meeting donations of paper cups/plates as well as school/art supplies will be collected for the Kids Soar program. In March our group will coordinate with the Frances Allen Circle to prepare the evening meal for the Kids Soar participants. Our next meeting will be Sunday, October 13 at 6:30 pm in the church library. All women are welcome to attend our meetings. Please contact Janice Phillips at 725-1358 for information.

Frances Allen Circle

The Frances Allen Circle will meet Tues. Oct.1 at the church at 10:30am. All women are invited to join us any time they have the first Tuesday open. Hostess are Becky Gee and Jackie Hall, Bonnie Dickerson will be leading the program "World Thank Offering: Women Offering Community". Join us for a time of fellowship, refreshments, Bible study and learn how United Methodist are "Offering Community" in the United States and around the World.

You Are Invited

The UMW will host a free screening of a new film from National Geographic entitled Paris to Pittsburgh. The screening will be on Sunday, Nov. 3 from 3-4:30 pm in the sanctuary with discussion and refreshments to follow. This film was produced by Radical Media in partnership with Bloomberg Philanthropies. (Michael Bloomberg, former mayor of NYC)

The focus of the film is on communities across the country and how they are developing real solutions for climate change even though the U.S. has withdrawn from the Paris Climate Accord. There are many incredible stories. After the film, Dr. Andreea Mihalache-O'Keef, who teaches in the Environmental Studies Dept. at Roanoke College, will moderate the discussion. Please join us for this timely and informative session.

Why is Children's choir important?

What keeps me passionate about providing musical experiences for children and youth?

Is it worth all the time and trouble?

Those are questions that I have contemplated throughout my career as a church music director. Sometimes our lives are so busy and our children are involved in so much that our church programs for young people may just seem like another activity to fit into an already hectic schedule. Certainly, the music program is a fun activity for the children to be involved in, developing in them a love of music while providing wonderful music for our worship services. The young people develop their musical gifts, learn about the importance of music in the church, learn about the Bible and our Methodist faith, and enjoy time with their church friends. But, it is much more than just another activity. It is also an opportunity to help children grow in their relationship with Christ and to make them feel connected to a church family, planting seeds that will last a lifetime.

I would like to share a personal story. When I was a child my mother took my two older sisters and me to church fairly regularly. We certainly were not there every Sunday, especially in the summer, but we would have been considered regular attenders. My sisters and I were baptized and confirmed in the Episcopal Church and we were involved in the choir program, Sunday school, youth group, and other church activities. My oldest sister, Sue, and I continued to stay active in the Episcopal Church throughout our teen years and, as adults, we explored other churches. Sue became an active member of a Presbyterian church, singing in the choir until her health prevented her from doing so, and I followed God's call into the music ministry, which took me on a journey to churches of a few different denominations. Obviously, Sue and I were profoundly impacted by our participation in a strong church choir program as children. For my other sister it was a different story. She gradually drifted away from the church during her teen years and as an adult did not attend church at all and did not raise her children in the church. She was a kind and giving person, working as a hospice nurse, and she did enjoy musical activities as an adult, but she had left the faith of her childhood behind. She had some struggles during her life and I must admit that, in my human weakness, I had given up altogether on her ever going back to church. I should have had more faith, because when my sister was in her fifties and going through a transition in her life she started to attend an episcopal church with a friend.

One day, Sue and I received an email from our sister. She told us that she was going to be joining the Episcopal church she had been attending. I almost couldn't believe what I was hearing and I was overjoyed. What struck me most was something she said about her experience of returning to church after a few decades away. She said that when she walked into that church she felt like she was "coming home". I realized that she was at a time in her life when she was able to open her heart to God again and he was able to walk right back in because of the experience we had in church as children.

My sister's experience confirmed for me the importance of providing a strong church experience for children and youth. Through our music program, I hope that we give young people a strong faith foundation, a sense of being part of a church family, and a relationship with Christ, in addition to developing their musical gifts. I hope that they will continue in their faith journey, staying connected to the church and strong in their faith throughout their lives. But, if they do wander away from God on their journey through life, as many will, I hope they will be able to experience the feeling of "coming home" when they come back to church at some point in their lives. All of us who work with the children in our church are planting seeds that will last throughout their lifetime. That is definitely worth the time and trouble.
